When we learn our native language, first we listen, then we speak, then we read and finally we write. Listening, speaking, reading and writing are the four language skills we need to develop for complete communication.

The four skills are mentioned below here:

1. Listening
2. Speaking
3. Reading
4. Writing

When we achieve this four skills, we will be able to improve English Language.

Listening and reading are receptive: input, i.e. the exposure you have to authentic language in use. Speaking and writing are productive: output, i.e. the action of producing language as part of the process of second language learning.

Practice makes perfect, which means that if you want to improve a certain skill you have to practice the following four skills. So, we will need to practice the mentioned four skills at the beginning period.

1. Listening:

Listening is an important skill that allows us to receive, understand and evaluate information that is communicated to us. As human beings, we seek to interact on a daily basis with each other. Listening is also a tool that helps us to tailor our approach when communicating with others on different levels and gives us the ability to either present or receive response.
